In his press and television statements, Mr. Zand accused Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi of condoning torture and charged that demonstrators in Tehran had been machine-gunned from the shah's own helicopter.

He also accused four journalists — including an employee of a U.S. publication, Arnaud de Borchgrave of Newsweek - of accepting gifts or expenses in return for favorable stories about the shah.

All four journalists have issued heated denials, and some of their colleagues have suggested that Mr. Zand attacked them precisely because they have taken the lead in portraying the sheh's government as a major bulwark against Soviet expansionism and subversion in the

Dayan Says Peace Treaty Is Now a 'Sealed Package'

'Take It or Leave It'

By William Claiborne

JERUSALEM, Nov. 22 (WP) -Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said today that the compromise treaty that Israel has agreed to sign cannot be tampered with, and that Egypt can "take it or leave it" as it now is written.

Emphasizing that his warning applies as well to Prime Minister Menachem Begin's hard-line critics at home, Mr. Dayan termed the draft treaty a "package that cannot be opened" without unraveling all of the progress made in a long, dif-ficult year of negotiations.

The foreign minister said the only legitimate purpose for the Israeli delegation to return to Washington would be to initial the compromise draft with the Egyptian delegates. He said the Israeli negotiators would not go to the U.S. capital to renegotiate any aspects of the compromise draft.

Moreover, Mr. Dayan said, if the Egyptian-Israeli pact is not signed, there will be no beginning of negotiations for Palestinian Arab selfovernment in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and Israel might might then unilaterally impose a "process of liberalization" in the occupied territories that would be different than negotiated autonomy.

Spoke to Ministry Aides

There are an estimated 2,500 Mr. Dayan's strongly worded Vietnamese aboard the Hai Hong who have been refused permission warning was made to senior staff members of the Israeli Foreign Ministry in a closed meeting, and related to correspondents by a ministry official. Mr. Dayan was quoted by the of-ficial as saying that there is nothing more for the Israeli and Egyptian negotiating delegations to talk about - at least with respect to the bilateral treaty — because it is a "sealed package."

Speaking to his aides in Hebrew for most of his talk, Mr. Dayan switched to English when he said the Egyptians are now in a position of "take it or leave it." Yesterday, Israel's Cabin reversal of its position of three weeks ago, declared that it is ready to sign a U.S.-proposed compromise treaty that contains an implicit link between the bilateral treaty between Egypt and Israel and the issue of autonomy for West Bank and Gaza Strip Palestinian Arabs.

Earlier Rebuff

Earlier this month, the Cabinet sent the draft back to Washington as unacceptable, a rebuff that triggered a spate of new Egyptian demands and slowed the momentum of the peace process.

In approving the draft, the Cabinet rejected outright Egyptian de-mands for a fixed timetable for implementing West Bank-Gaza autonomy and for an Egyptian police

U.S. soldiers, meanwhile, began ferrying out the bodies of 408 U.S. suicide victims from the remote

MANAGUA, Nov. 22 (UPI) -Five Venezuelan warplanes reportedly landed in Costa Rica today in a move that threatened to escalate efforts to overthrow President

President Rodrigo Carazo of Costa Rica urged President Carter to persuade Gen. Somoza to return five Costa Rican policemen killed, wounded and captured in a border clash yesterday with Nicaraguan troops that sparked the con-trontation.

Ugandan troops who seized the territory were as vicious as the Tanzanians say they were. It is a scene of unrestrained destruction. Stores were looted. Mud hou smashed and pockmarked with bullet holes. Churches were destroyed, cattle stolen and sugar-cane crops burned to the ground. There are no civilians.

Three miles up the road, where Tanzanian soldiers in jungle camoutlage trek through the mud, a government district office sits without a roof, its windows blackened by fire. In front, under a swaying pine tree, is the corpse of a man in maroon pants. The body has been disemboweled and the head is lying beside the right elbow.

The Tanzanian government permitted four Western correspondents to travel briefly to the Kagera salient, the 700-square-mile strip overrun by 3,000 Ugandan troops on Oct. 30 and held for two weeks. It was the first opportunity for journalists to visit the front.

During a two-hour tour that reached a point six miles north of the river, after an arduous journey across roads a foot deep in mud, it was impossible to totally verify Tanzanian claims that genocide had taken place.

But judging from the accounts of refugees, who told stories of Ugandan soldiers spraying village compounds with machine-gun fire, and udging from the scope of the destruction to property, it is apparent that the marauding invaders killed civilians with abandon.

Tanzania asserts that 40,000 residents escaped the Ugandans by fleeing across the Kagera, leaving behind between 5,000 and 10,000 unaccounted for and feared dead. Among them, according to reports carried by Tanzania's governmentowned Daily News, were 485 Tanzanians transported to a prison at (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

GEORGETOWN, Guyana, Nov. 22 (WP) — When I first reached Jonestown, with Rep. Leo Ryan's party, we were all struck by the neat wooden structures so far from civilization, and by the mix of blacks and whites, young and old na's remote rain forest. - seemingly normal people who, we were told, had willingly chosen to live so far from home.

Marceline Jones, James Jones's wife, met us as we left the Jonestown dump truck that had brought us from the Port Kaimma airstrip, where our plane had landed several hours before and where Rep. Ryan would be killed along with four others the next afternoon.

Marcie, as everyone called her, invited us to the pavilion where Mr. Jones awaited us and where he would lead his followers in a mass suicide less than 24 hours later. Evcrything was so alive and so peaceful that Friday night, at least on the surface, that it was impossible to know that this carefully cultivated little world would soon be destroyed by a man gone mad.

Marcie told us that supper - hot pork sandwiches and greens, fruit tarts and coffee -was ready.

We would be told proudly by our hosts that everything we ate had been raised in Jonestown, this quasi-religious, socialist agricultural commune carved out of Guya-

Greeted by Residents

As we walked to the pavilion, residents of the commune greeted us individually and accompanied us. They engaged us in conversa-tion, asking about our trip, telling us how glad they were that we would have a chance to see that Jonestown was not the concentration camp that its detractors had

Most of the commune residents, those who were not part of the welcoming party, were eating dinner in a nearby dining area, washing clothes in the open-air communal laundry or baking bread.

Children gathered around swings and benches near the pavilion and Jonestown appeared to be just what its brochures said it was: a place where people of all races and ages could live in peace without the violence and hate they had known in the ghetto and without the materi-alistic anxieties of their native United States. Jonestown was an experiment in socialism, we were told, where money, power and elitism had been eliminated. The hundreds of seniors, as the aged were called, got the best medical attention and their lives had new meaning. For the young blacks among the more than 800 residents, Jonestown offered an escape from the drugs and crime in which we were told many of them had been involved before coming to Guyana. And for the middle class, college-educated whites — who seemed to hold the top leadership positions - Jones-town seemed to be a logical extension of the civil rights and antiwar battles they had fought in the past decade. It was the socialist society that they wanted for their native country, but that they realized was impossible at least for now.

Although we had been told that once we got to Jonestown, we would be free to wander and talk to anyone we wished, we began to feel we were being guided.

First to the pavilion, then to sit down with one of our new friends," then to meet the leader himself, who sat at the head of our table complaining about a 103 de-gree fever he said he had suffered from that day. We then went to eat dinner and to watch an elaborate and highly professional two hours of entertainment provided by the Jonestown band and various ama-

After dinner and during the show, I walked over to Rep. Ryan to ask him if he had learned anything. He said no; not very much yet, but pointed to a tall middle-aged white man with a crewcut who, along with all of the more than 700 Jonestown residents in the pavilion that night, moved to the

I also would not forget the man whom the congressmawn pointed out. His name, I later learned, was Tom Kice, Sr., and he would be shooting at me and the others at the airstrip the next aftenoon.

As I walked around the pavilion. I noticed that most people scattered as soon as I came near. I also noted that someone would always come along and be friendly. "Hi, how are you doing? Don't you want to listen to the music,?" "Sure," I said, "but I can hear it from here. I'm curious to see your facilities."

The usual response was that there would be a tour the next day, that people probably were asleep in was given why I really should not wander around on my own.

I decided to return to the table where Mr. Jones was talking to some of the other reporters who had come along. Mark Lane and Charles Garry. Jonestown's two lawyers, were there, as were several young people who I would later learn were Mr. Jones's principal lieutenants.

"People here are happy for the first time in their lives." Mr. Jones was saying, "When can this dialogue [between Jonestown and its detractors] stop so we can all live in peace? I don't want to tear these people up."

Mr. Carter claimed investment tax credits — reducing his federal income taxes — in 1975 and 1976 for the purchase of slightly more than $1 million in new equipment for the warehouse. But in those same years, ABC said, the new equipment was valued in Sumter County for property-tax purposes at $425,000.

The ABC report suggested that the president either had overstated the cost of the equipment, in order to obtain a larger investment tax credit from the federal government, or had undervalued it when reporting it to local officials, in order to ed the re-appraisal of the presi-dent's local property taxes.

Factors Cited

Mr. Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said the undervaluation resulted from a number of factors. For 1975 taxes, he said, the warehouse had supplied county officials with an extensive list of new equipment purchased that year, listing the cost of some of the items but omitting cost figures for others. In calculating the value of the warehouse's holdings, Mr. Powellsaid, county officials apparently had added up only the cost figures plied to them. Mr. Powell said yesterday that he assumed the cost figures had not been available for some of the equipment when the tax declaraion was filed. He said the undervaluation also occurred because the value of some construction work done at the warehouse was not originally included in the calculations and that, as an "oversight," Billy Carter had not reported to local officials that the warehouse owned a number of unlicensed vehicles.

At the time, Billy Carter was in charge of the family business and his brother was campaigning full time for the presidency.

The outcome marked a diplomatic victory for the United States and other Western countries opposed to any text sanctioning curbs on press

The final text, which bore little resemblance to the original draft submitted for negotiations four weeks ago, reflected Western governments' amendments. Besid dorsing the free flow of information, it stresses human rights, drops earlier provisions possibly support-ing governmental responsibility for the press, and calls for protection of journalists, guarantees of their access to information and freedom to report without censorship or

U.S. Ambassador John Reinhardt said he doubted that reporters and news coverage would be affected practically by the Unesco code, which was unenforceable in the usual legal sense."

The original text, however, might have enabled governments to "explain and justify" restrictions on local reporting and foreign correspondents, he said. Other conference sources said that Western diplomacy in Unesco had produced "a remarkable turnaround" on the press code in favor of reporting freedom and against Soviet concepts. Reflecting the protracted, often bitter controversy in Unesco over the document, Unesco Director-General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow said he had "had doubts and mis-givings about [the chances of] arriving at a consensus." A final split over the issue would have profoundly troubled Unesco's relations with Western member governments, notably a handful of industrial countries which contribute 60 percent of the organization's budget, diplomats said. At the Unesco general conference today, delegates who had negotiated intensely during the past four weeks, stood and applauded to signify their governments' acceptance of the document. Ratification by the 146 member countries is considered a formality.

The standing ovation — and Unesco officials' unmistakable feeling of relief and impression that their organization has gained a new lease on life - was a striking contrast to the divisive mood and forecasts of national walkouts when the conference opened last month.

The Unesco consensus was a personal political victory for Mr. M'Bow, who reportedly has ambi-tions to be re-elected Unesco head and then to seek the job of UN sec-

"He claimed he was afraid of nothing, which I know was bull." the son said. "My father was a very frightened man. He claimed he didn't have an ego, and the oppo-site was true. He had one of the biggest egos I ever saw in my life."

The commune became a reflection of his father's frightened visions, the son said. On the one hand, he said, "so many beautiful things" were being produced by hard work. On the other, his father and his inner circle overreacted to wild fantasies of oppressive enemies on the outside.

The son said some ugly things had happened at Jonestown. It was possible, he said, that children were disciplined by tying a rope around their bodies and throwing them into a deep well. He also thought possible that unruly teen-agers or runaways had been placed in "in-tensive care" and treated with drugs. But he said he knew nothing of locking children in a packing crate for long periods to discipline them or of rumors that the com-mune had created an assassination squad among the younger men. Mr. Jones is being detained with 45 commune members at the cult's Georgetown headquarters, where four others — two young women and two children — had their throats slit on Saturday night.

Another cult member, Paula Adams, 29, of Lucaya, Calif., said she had fallen out of favor last winter after four years in the commune and had been ordered transferred to the Georgetown office. "I had questioned too many things," she said. "I was not trusted."

when she moved to Georg she was not permitted to take her 2year-old child with her. "Loved ones were always left in the interior when a cult member was sent to Georgetown," she said, because Mr. Jones was thus assured that those absent would return.

"Were the children hostages?" she was asked. 'Yes," she said.

"And where is your baby now?" a reporter asked. Her voice failed her. "I don't know," she said at last. "I don't

Alleged Leader In Abduction of Empain Caught

PARIS, Nov. 22 (AP) — François Caillol, alleged ringleader of the gang that kidnapped Baron Edouard-Jean Empain and held him hooded and chained for nine weeks, was arrested here last night.

The police said Caillol, 37, was picked up as he arrived at an apartment where another alleged leading member of the gang, Georges Bertoncini, was captured earlier yesterday. Bertoncini had been arrested in Lisbon June 10 but later escaped. Caillol's brother, Alain, was arrested in a shoot-out with the police March 24 when they closed in as the ransom of 40 million francs (about $8 million) for the baron was supposedly being handed over.

Alain agreed after police interrogation to telephone the gang, telling them to release Baron Emp who was freed two days later. During his captivity, the gang had cut off the tip of his little finger and sent it to bis family with a ransom

FBI Finds Dynamite, Holds 3 Men in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP) -The FBI arrested three Yugoslavs in connection with a dynamite cache found in a Manhattan park-

Police said that the bomb squad removed 13 sticks of dynamite from a garage near the Hudson River. The FBI said that the men, all three Serbs, will be arraigned to-day in federal court.

Stephan Jones, second from right, son of cult leader, James Jones, tells news conference in Georgetown, Guyana, that his father was in poor health and dependent on drugs. With him are members of the People's Temple. From left: Deborah Touchette, Paula Adams and Lee Ingram.

I was sitting right next to Mr. Jones and I remembered something Grace Stoen, a former People's Temple member by whom Mr. Jones claimed to have fathered a son, had told me. She said Mr. Jones, for all his insistence that he was a caring, unselfish man, was in fact incredibly vain and power hun-

'Just look at his sideburns," she said. "He fills them with eye liner." I was curious. It was true.

Suddenly, as I was staring at Mr. Jones's sideburns, his demeanor changed. I didn't hear the question he had just been asked, but the answer, I thought, was revealing: "Threat, threat, threat of extinc-tion," he raged. "I wish I wasn't born, at times. I understand hate, love and hate. They are very close." "They can have me." he said. "In many ways I feel like I'm dying.

I've never felt this way before."

Someone asked Mr. Jones about the beatings that reportedly took place at Jonestown, about the black box that residents were said to be placed in for days at a time when they did something Mr. Jones did not like, about the endless sermons he preached that kept his people, even the aged, up until 2 or 3 in the morning even though they had to rise at 6 a.m. to begin work.

Another Rage

This prompted another rage and I almost felt sorry for the man. He was obviously sick and some of what he said seemed incoherent. "I do not believe in violence," said. "Violence corrupts. And then they say I want power. What kind of power do I have walking down the path talking to little old

"I hate power," he continued, his rage growing. "I hate money. The only thing I wish now that I was never born, All I want is peace. I'm not worried about my image. If we could just stop it, stop this fighting. But if we don't I don't know what's going to happen to 1,200 lives here.

The music had ended. The interview had ended. Except for Rep. Ryan, his aides, Mr. Lane, Mr. Garry and a representative of the Guyanese government, the rest of us were soon on our way back to Port Kaituma, where Mr. Jones had arranged for us to sleep on the floor of a discotheque.

It was the last place Don Harris and Robert Brown of NBC, and Gregory Robinson, a photographer for the San Francisco Examiner, would sleep. They would die the next afternoon.

That night, we were sitting around having a drink when a local policeman came to the discotheque. He sought us out and told us some

Locust Swarms Termed Plague In Asia, Africa

ROME, Nov. 22 (UPI) — Locust infestations in the desert regions of Africa and southwest Asia have reached plague proportions and will resist all possible eradication efforts for at least another year, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization reported today.

The FAO said that if not stopped, the locusts could sweep from the Himalayas in Asia to the Atlantic coast of Africa. The most seriously affected areas are the Sudan, the Horn of Africa and the coastal areas of the Red Sea, the FAO said.

The report said that the plague began after 16 years of dormancy by the locusts and despite the application of more than 2,400 tons of insecticides in 10 countries this things, one of which was particular-ly interesting. He said he knew for sure that there was at least one gun in Jonesville, an automatic rifle, that had been registered with the Guvariese government.

'Bold-Faced Lie'

Don Harris asked Mr. Jones about the gun in an interview that he taped when we returned to mestown the next morning.
"A bold-faced lie!" Mr. Jones thundered. "It seems like we are defeated by lies." Mr. Jones said he believed there was a conspiracy against him and against the People's Temple, a con-spiracy that he blamed for a number of lawsuits that he said prevented him from returning to the United States

Facts were beginning to overcome Mr. Jones's denials as fast as he could make them. Don Harris was throwing questions at Mr. Jones, hard questions that events were making even harder to answer. "The more that leave, the less re-

Mr. Harris returned to the question of guns at Jonestown.

U.K. Gets Bids For Oil Drilling

LONDON, Nov. 22 (Reuters) — Nearly 100 oil companies have re-plied to the British government's latest offer of concessions to drill for oil in the North Sea, Energy Secretary Anthony Benn has

A total of 55 applications involving nearly 100 companies have been submitted for the 46 parcels where drilling is being invited, Mr. Bean said. But he said Exxon, the world's largest oil company, did not apply, and Shell, an important North Sea operator, applied to drill only in one small area.

The British government has said it will increase state control of offshore oil development and increase the petroleum-revenue tax.

"The only thing I feel is that every time they go, they lie. What I thought was keeping them here was the fear of the ghetto, alienation, the fear of industrialized society. I must have failed somehow.

Tunisia Seizes Two Sicilian Fishing Boats

Many U.S. Waste Disposal Sites May Pose Serious Health Risks

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (NYT) - The Environmental Prote tion Agency said yesterday that it assumed there were at least 638 disposal sites in the United States that may contain hazardom wastes harmful to the public's health. The agency did not identify these sites, saying they had been located on the basis of file surveys, though most of them were aiready known to state and local environmental protection depart The agency listed an additional 103 waste sites on which it said some federal or state action had been taken. These included the Love Canal and Hyde Park landfill sites in Niagara Falls, N.Y. where the Hooker Chemical Corp. had dumped hazardous waster as well as the Kin-Buc landfill in Middlesex County, N.J. The EPA estimated that between 30 and 40 million tons of hazardous wastes were being produced in the United States each year.

More than 80 percent of these were being disposed of in ways that would not meet forthcoming disposal standards, the agency said This preliminary survey indicates that thousands of potentially dangerous chemical dump sites exist throughout this country and for decades we have been disposing of these chemicals without adequate safeguards," the EPA administrator. U.K. Ford Workers Win A 17% Increase in Wages

LONDON, Nov. 22 (UPI) -- The 57,000 workers of the U.S.-owned Ford plants throughout Britain voted overwhelmingly today to end a nine-week strike estimated to have cost the company more than £450 million (about $900 million) in lost production.

They voted during meetings by show of hands to accept a pay hike of a little under 17 per cent - more than three times the 5 per cent antiinflation ceiling set by Prime Min-ister James Callaghan's Labor gov-ernment for all pay boosts in the next 12 months. The government has warned it will apply "sanctions" against Ford and any other major company breaking the pay limit. In the case of Ford these were likely to involve ending government contracts worth millions of pounds to buy Ford products.

But, despite warnings of sanctions, unions in other industries have filed pay demands of 40 to 45 per cent and threatened crippling strikes if these are not met. In addition to a production loss of 100,000 vehicles to the company the two main Ford unions — the Transport and General Workers and the Engineering Workers --have paid out more than £3 million (about $6 million) in strike pay.

The company initially offered a 5-percent raise. The workers at once walked out and shut down all the plants. The unions originally had demanded about a boost of 27 per cent.

Mini-cassette 2 has, on each side, a special built-in indexing strip. After each dictation item, or before recording an important message for your secretary, simply press a button on the microphone and a mark is made on the strip. At the same time, a special tone is recorded on the tape. From the marks, your secretary can see how much dictation has been recorded, and if the tape contains any messages. . With our new machines, designed to recognize the special tones, any recorded item can be found - quickly and accurately. Afterwards, the marks can be erased, so the cassette can be used indefinitely.

here, still beset by treacherous preoccupations, still stumbling and searching for peace and self-esteem. In the United States, the Thanksgiving sermons will express gratitude as they should, for the gifts of a Providence which has blessed the country with material ease, and among those gifts is the time and opportunity to say so.

But with material ease goes a recognized want of spiritual satisfaction. We cannot think we are a people especially destined to receive what we have been given, or what we have taken. The pilgrims who celebrated the first Thanksgiving in the harsh setting of Massachusetts Bay were far closer to the hungry and the insecure in other parts of the world, threatened daily by disaster, than they

So it is only with concern for those whose stomachs are not filled today that we can properly enjoy that part of nature we have been able to convert to our own use. The Thanksgiving of 1978 finds the world still 20th century has taught its children much. But there is nevertheless one lesson we have learned, the lesson of human brotherhood, which will not let us sit down to a laden table without a thought of those whose table is not laden, or who will never see such a sight for one year's end to another.

> This does not mean we deserve to feel guilty or unworthy so long as we believe that others are equally worthy too. If we know how to reap plenteously, it follows in the simplest of ways that we must show others how to sow plenteously. This is the thought that should come to us when we get bored by hearing about world hunger campaigns or when we make the easy assumptions that the waste and corruption that seem to go hand in hand with the relief of misery are inevitable political realities. For nothing that is purely iven can be truly wasted.

Abiding by Camp David

Is it now safe to hope that Israel and Egypt can go ahead and conclude a peace treaty? That would seem to follow from Israel's decision to accept the U.S.-sponsored draft that it rejected four weeks ago. At that time, the preamble's "linkage" between an Egyptian-Israeli treaty and negotiations on West Bank-Gaza autonomy seemed to some Israeli cabinet ministers too explicit. In fact, the language reflected precisely the careful ambiguity of the Camp David accords; it balanced off Egypt's need to assure its Arab allies that it was not bargaining for itself alone and the Israelis' need for assurance that, as President Carter said, they "retain an option on the final status of the West Bank and Gaza."

Only when Egypt, responding to the Israeli Cabinet, countered with its own unacceptable departures from the Camp David accords — a demand for a timetable for West Bank and Gaza autonomy and for an Egyptian presence in Gaza - did the Israelis realize they had overstepped. They now wish to turn back the clock to the U.S. draft. President Sadat, we trust, will do the same.

In suggesting the other day that the Camp David accords might have to be modified, President Carter added a condition: "if both sides agree." Otherwise, he said, "we will insist that those accords be honored meticulously." Frankly, we doubt the two sides will soon agree on modifying the accords. Even if an agreed defect - say, an oversight - were detected (and none has been), making a change would conjure up a twin specter of revision and unraveling. The political implications would be too overwhelming.

But if the accords are not to be changed, iney musi inaeea de "nonorea meticulousiy The Israelis, by attempting to loosen the linkage between an Egyptian-Israeli treaty and West Bank-Gaza negotiations, raised suspicions that they were trying to back out of what to Egypt was the fundamental tenet negotiated at Camp David. Tending to confirm those suspicions was Prime Minister Begin's call at the same time to "thicken" Israel's West Bank settlements. This move. coming just as Israel was complaining that Jordan and West Bankers were holding themselves aloof from the Camp David process, suggested to many Arabs, and others. that some Israelis wished to encourage the Jordanians and West Bankers to do precisely

Meanwhile, the Egyptians, by trying to write a specific West Bank-Gaza timetable into their treaty with Israel, aroused fears that they were trying to back out of what to Israel was the basic point of Camp David. The Israelis are determined to cement a peace treaty with the one Arab neighbor that will now deal with them. With reason, they fear that to hinge a treaty with Egypt on specific steps they must take with Arabs who refuse to deal with them is to give radical Palestinians a veto over the Egyptian treaty. Egypt could yet, after a treaty, decline to put some of its diplomatic provisions into effect. That is Egypt's leverage on a resolution of the Palestinian issue: Israel's leverage lies in its physical occupation of the West Bank and Gaza territories.

The roller coaster of recent weeks should have reminded even the most optimistic wellwishers of the Arab-Israeli peace process how easy it is to fall off. The rail to hold to, however, is Camp David. It was a brilliant achievement, particularly in its distinctions between what could be decided now (the Sinai) and what had to be left for settlement over time (the West Bank and Gaza). Brilliance aside, it represented an agreement and commitment between two countries with a powerful — and mutual — interest in making

A Red Carpet for Senators

Sen, Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the leader of a Senate delegation that spent several days in the Soviet Union, likes to think that the sometimes-stormy sessions with Soviet leaders were worthwhile if they did no more than make the Kremlin more aware of U.S. political realities — and vice versa.

One such reality is the degree of independence enjoyed by the Senate in its foreign-policy role. Another is that many senators' votes on the prospective strategic arms limitation agreement will be influenced heavily by Soviet behavior in areas that have nothing directly to do with SALT-2.

As members of the 12-man delegation conceded unhappily, there is no assurance that their visit had any effect on their hosts. But whether the Russians learned anything or not, the senators left Moscow with a heightened appreciation of how deep and fundamental differences in perception between the two sides make successful negotiations difficult.

The senators met with four members of the 13-man ruling Politburo, including President Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin. This unusually high access suggests that the Kremlin understands well the power of the Senate in foreign affairs, and was anxious to make a good impression.

Yet Kosygin, especially, reacted angrily when the senators expressed concern over human rights in Russia, the Soviet role in Africa, the supply of MiG-23s to Cuba and the overall Soviet arms buildup - and emphasized that they could spoil the atmosphere in which an arms-control agreement is voted on by the Senate.

The clumsy display of irritation may have been calculated, but it is just as likely that it was real.

The Soviet Union, notwithstanding its signature on the human-rights provisions of the Helsinki agreement, does look on foreign criticism of its violations as interference in its internal affairs.

The Kremlin leaders do believe that the Soviet Union and Cuba are riding the tide of history in places like Africa, and that it is the Western powers that are wrong by trying to

They do have a hard time believing that a U.S. president can't control the Senate if he really wants to. And they resent being crossexamined by men who, by their lights, are minor politicians.

The fact remains that the Senate does have a strong role in foreign policy, and any government imagining it can do business with the United States without regard for Senate attitudes is deluding itself.

The fact that the Russians rolled out the reddest of red carpets for the senators suggests they are beginning to accept this reality.

Take a Stand on Pretoria

By Jonathan Power

ONDON - "South Africa is interpring the West with its own sanctions" - the shrewd ob-servation of an U.S. diplomat. At the West approaches its near inevitable showdown with South Africa over Namibia, the truth of that remark becomes every day more apparent. For the West to get into a confrontation with rich, self-sufficient white South Africa over a stretch of semidesert country, legally the possession of the United Na-tions but ruled by Pretoria — that barely anyone in the West knows the name of - is not a way to win votes and accolades at home. Quite

The latent sympathy for white South Africa that lies deep within the bosom of a significant part of the predominantly white electorates in Europe and North America might become actively roused if they see their governments spend-ing inordinate amounts of energy and finance, with a not unnoticeable disruption to economic life at nome, for the sake of the "freedom" of a few million blacks in a faraway African country, a freedom that must be in quotation marks since a new black govern-ment is likely to be at once Marxist and anti-civil libertarian.

Tucked Away

There is however another side to the coin. Namibia, it is true, is a relatively insignificant country tucked away in the bottom corner of Africa, but is the territory which the dice of history have determined will be the point at which the broad interests of Western democracy and the narrow interest of white supremist governments in southern Africa come into conflict. Namibia. 1978, is not too unlike Czechoslovakia, 1938.

Whatever the rights and wrongs of whether the West should support the cause of radical change in southern Africa (I happen to be-lieve it is right), the simple truth is it has to. The Soviet Union, the East Germans and the Cubans are firmly tied in with all the black guerrilla movements: in SWAPO, the Namibian movement based in neighboring Angola, in ZAPU and (to a lesser extent) in ZANU, the Rhodesian movements based in Zambia and Mozambique. No military analyst who knows the situation today would argue that Rhodesia is holdable for more than a year or two and probably much less. In Namibia, where the guerrilla movement is not so experienced or well-armed, the time might be stretched to five or even, if SWAPO were left to itself. 10 years. In prac-tice it would be less because once it became clear that the West was not delivering on its firm commitments to the rest of the world to end South African rule in Namibia, the Russians and their allies would have a carte blanche to step up their military support.

Predicament

If the West in any way tried to support South Africa in this predicament, it would find itself rejected not just by the rest of black Africa, which would be bad enough, since Nigeria alone is a more important trading partner than South Africa, but by hage chunks of Asia and South America. Added to that would be the divisions in its own camp.
The furore over the Vietnam war might be minor in comparison. So obvious is this scenario that if the West tries a half-way house, like linking Soviet restrain in southern Africa to SALT or to trade deals. the Russians would call the West's

All this argument is well enough known to the leaders of the West. Indeed. I have heard it myself on a number of occasions from Cyrus Vance and David Owen, the two foreign ministers most involved. Biding His Time

I had the chance to briefly talk this over Mr. Vance while we were both in Moscow last month. Nothing he said conflicted with the determination he expressed to me earthe likelihood of sanctions. The conclusion must be that in Pretoria, Mr. Vance was engaged in a tactical maneuver, biding his time in the hope that in the 11th hour the South Africans will see sense. Perhaps they were waiting for the congressional elections to be out of the

Although I do not question Mr. Vance's own commitment, still less Andrew Young's, whose influence on President Carter remains undiminished. There is an unfortunate sense of disarray in the Western camp. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has let it be known through an in-terview in this month's Africa magazine that he thinks economic sanctions are counterproductive. The French are now for sanctions, a sharp turnaround on their previous position. The British are too obviously betwixt and between with the Cabinet's debate reflected in alter-

Byproducts of the opening of an oceanic basin may be of great importance. In the Atlantic, for example, they include vast deposits of black shale, thought to be a precursor of oil and gas formation, particularly when cooked by heat below. In the Atlantic, though, the splitting process cannot readily be studied because mountains of sediment have buried evidence of what happened.

There is, however, what seems a close parallel of a newly opening ocean — Mexico's Gulf of California. And, in the coming months, two projects will explore the process. One of them is the most ambitious effort so far to monitor seafloor earthquake activity. It will employ some 70 submersible caused by movements of the ocean-seismometers — virtually all those in the world outside the Soviet

> One specially designed seismometer, 15 feet long, will be lowered into a 1,600-foot hole that will be drilled into the crest of the East Pa-cific Rise where it enters the Gulf of California. The spreading of the seafloor away from that rise split the peninsula of Baja California from the Mexican mainland.

> The splitting process, which be-gan about 4 million years ago, has worked northward into California's Imperial Valley and is related to the sliding movements that cause California's earthquakes. It is also believed to be an analogue of the rupturing that gave birth to the Atlantic Ocean ments under the Gulf of California and along its shores are thin enough to bring those zones within reach of the drill ship Glomar Challenger. In an effort that parallels the seismic observations, the ship will drill holes in various areas of the gulf and near its mouth.

Much of the effort to record earthquake activity will be concentrated on the fringes of the Rivera Plate, a section of seafloor south of the gulf where relative motion between plates produces many quakes. The Rivera Plate is named for Diego Rivera, the late Mexican muralist, and the program is known as ROSE, for Rivera Ocean Seismic

For a month, beginning in mid-January, hundreds of explosive charges ranging in weight from less than a pound to one ton will be detonated in the gulf so that seismographs on the scafloor and additional ones ashore can be used to chart deep structures with re-corded shock waves.

Since the explosions will occur at known places and times, recording them on shore should, for the first time, make possible precise pin-pointing of each natural earthquake. At present, so little is known of shock-wave velocities under the gulf that quake positions are sometimes accurate only to within 20 or 30 miles. The following month, the seismic arrays will be used to record natural quakes.

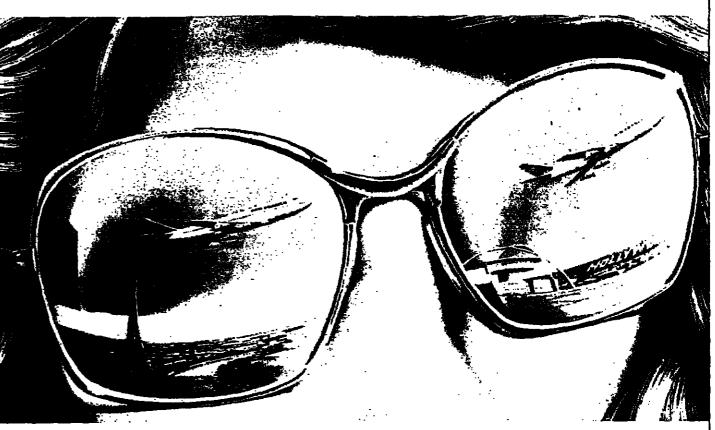

The drilling, beginning in December, will bore into the Rivera Plate, as well as into the floor of the Guaymas Basin halfway up the gulf. The sites have been chosen to sample the transition between continental rock and newly formed seafloor.

The projected experiments in clude measurement of the heat flow from the Earth's interior, sampling of the water (which may be rich in metals), and testing of the rock properties at the bottom of the hole by induced water pressure.

Heat flow through the floor of the Guaymas Basin is "extremely high," according to the prospectus Helium is leaking from the Earth's interior there, and hot springs are depositing material extracted from the rocks below onto the seafloor in a manner thought to have created some of the world's metal deposits A similar process has laid purified metal on the floor of the Red Sea, which has many features in common with the Gulf of California.

The organizers of the ROSE project are from more than a dozen universities and research centers in the United States, Mexico and Europe. So intensive a study of seafloor earthquake activity has never before been possible, since no single research institution has more than a handful of ocean-bottom

The new Superswede. Saab 900 Turbo.

Our new Superswede, the exhibarating Saab 900 Turbo, puts you in command of the highway just as surely as Superswede Björn Borg commands the tennis courts.

Take the wheel of the new Saab 900 for a totally satisfying driving experience. Never did you expect to find so much innovation, so much technical refinement in one motor car.

Inside, the supreme comfort of the ultimate driving environment. Sound insulated interior. Ergonomic, heated driver's seat. Clear, easy-to-read instrumentation on a sensibly curved dash. And a unique ventilation system with a replaceable filter to make sure your fresh air really is fresh.

The Saab 900 is the most roadworthy car we have ever made. It responds immediately and faithfully to every maneuver of the driver. It is consistent in its behaviour.

The Saab 900 Turbo is one of four exciting models in the new 900 series. There are 3 and 5 door versions. 2-litre engine; twin carbs or fuel injection alternatives to turbo power.

Test drive any of the new Saab 900's and feel what it's like to take command of the highway. Superswede style.

Surgical Sterilization Gaining in U.S.

By Jane E. Brody NEW YORK (NYT) - This year more than a million U.S. couples will find freedom from pills, IUDs, diaphragms, condoms. pregnancies by either the husband or wife having a simple operation.

Approximately half of the estihave been sterilized to date are women. (Vasectomies, sterilizations for males, have surged in populari-ty in the past decade: about half a million are performed in the U.S. annually.)

The female operation, commonly called "tying the tubes." is some-what more popular than vasectomy, largely because new techniques have simplified the procedure, putting it more nearly on a par with vasectomy for cost, safety and time

For both sexes, sterilization's at-

include:

tractiveness has been enhanced by fears of hazards associated with other contraception methods, particularly the possible long-term tisks of the pill; by contraceptive failures; by growing concerns about overpopulation; and by the soaring costs of raising and educating children.

Most Effective

Sterilization is by far the most effective way of avoiding unwanted pregnancy (about 100 times more so than the pill, the next surest method), and the health hazards are usually one-time risks faced at the time of the procedure,

Female sterilization involves ying, cutting or otherwise sealing the fallopian tubes: The operation makes it impossible for the male's sperm to reach the female's egg. The surgery does not affect the woman's menstrual cycle, change the normal production of sex hor-mones, or interfere with sexual expression or desire.

It is extremely important, howev-er, for both men and women first to think through the possible situations that might change a decision to have no more children. How would you feel if one or more of your children died, if you were divorced and did not retain custody of your children, if your spouse died, if you remarried someone who might want to have children with you, if you had nothing to fill your life after your children grew up and moved away?

Much Safer

Consider also the fact that although the operations are much safer than in the past, they still involve anesthesia, surgery and risk of complications, including death. Differnt techniques vary in effectiveness and in the likelihood of complications. The procedures most commonly performed today Laparotomy. The traditional sterilization operation, it involves a large abdominal incision followed usually by tying and cutting the tubes. It requires about five days in the hospital and weeks of recovery; it leaves a lasting scar. It is the most surefire method of sterilization, but has largely been replaced by other procedures that are safer.

quicker and less traumatic. Laparoscopy. Commonly alled "bellybutton surgery," it usually can be done on an outpatient basis, taking 15 to 20 minutes to complete. The procedure uses a lighted instrument that gives the doctor a view of the tubes through a half-inch incision made in the lower rim of the navel. The abdomen is first inflated with carbon dioxide to provide an unobstructed view and to reduce the chance of injuring other organs; then the laparoscope is inserted. In most instances, the tubes are sealed by burning them electrically. (The procedure is far more effective if the burning is combined with cutting out a segment of each tube and scaling the ends.) The resulting damage to the tubes is extensive, so chances of reversing the operation are slim. But it is effective in pre-venting pregnancy: Recorded fail-ure rates are as low as one per Overall, laparoscopy is an extremely safe operation, and compli-cations (which occur in about 5 percent of patients) are usually short-lived. Still, serious after-effects are not unknown: 20 in 100,000 die as a result of the procedure. Two-thirds of most postoperative patients are back to normal activities within a day or two.

• Minilaparotomy. Here, an inch-long incision is made just above the pubic hairline, and by manipulating the uterus through the vagina, the tubes are brought into direct view; any method of scaling them can be used, but most often they are tied and cut. The operation can be performed by a skilled physician in 10 to 30 minutes, usually under local anesthesia. and the patient can go home the same day unless complications develop. The rate of complications is similar to that associated with laparoscopy (both rates should fall as doctors become more familiar with the techniques), as is its birth-con-

Hysterectomy

Some women resort to hysterectomy (removal of the uterus) to become sterile. But hysterectomy is by far the most dangerous method and should not be used for sterilization unless there are other medically urgent reasons for removing the uterus. Fifteen percent of women having hysterectomies suffer se-rious complications, 10 times more than with tubal sterilization.

As for long-term effects of female sterilization, there have been several reports from England stating that years after the proce-dure, some women have developed extremely heavy and painful men-strual periods, which may necessitate hysterectomies.

The costs of female sterilization in the United States generally range from $150 to $1,000.

Lausanne Foundation Will House Monnet Archives

By Calla Corner

AUSANNE, Switzerland (IHT) - Jean Monnet, one of the prime exponents of a unified Europe and among the most influential men of this century, has given his archives to the University of Lausanne.

The gift has made possible the setting up of the Jean Monnet Foundation for Europe, based here its aim will be to contribute to efforts for a united Europe, inspired by Monnet's thoughts, methods and actions.

The foundation will be under the direction of Professor Henri Rieben. Monnet's longtime friend and associate. It includes in its membership many of the people Monnet has known and worked with over the years: Walter Scheel, Willy Brandt, Edward Heath, Roy Jenkins, George Ball, Katharine Graham and James Reston.

The eight tons of archives private correspondence, books, tapes, films, official documents and reports — cover the highlights of a career that spans 60 years. They will be housed at the University of Lausanne in a specially built library that will be open to the public

Rieben notes that Monnet. who celebrated his 90th birthday Nov. 9 and received an honorary doctorate from the University of

because of its central-European position, because a large per-centage of the student body is foreign and because he has always admired Switzerland and its institutions. Rieben says that Monnet, a methodical note-taker, never let a meeting go by without record-ing it nor allowed a thought to pass without jotting it down. He says that the majority of Monnet's papers have never been seen by anyone except his family and associates, but that now that Monnet has published his memoirs (1976) and that his health is failing, he believes the archives should be made public for the good of Europe.

Some of the documents included in the papers are:

• The Declaration of Union (1940), conceived by Monnet and agreed to by Winston Churchil and Charles de Gaulle, that would have united Palie. that would have united Britain and France under one flag against the Axis powers. France fell hours before the declaration was to be issued. • The Balance Sheet, a paper measuring 54-by-40-centimeters

Rieben says that because Monnet has known just about everyone of any importance in this century, his correspondence will be immensely interesting. He says that the papers are so complete that when they are finally catalogued, which may take months, he will probably find the French passport which Churchill signed permitting Monnet to travel as a British citizen during the war. Monnet, the son of a brandy merchant in Cognac, was sent by his father to Canada, the U.S. and England as a young man to open up markets for the family business. This early exposure to the outside world and Monnet's assessment of the need for collective organization in business he says in his memoirs, provided him with ideas on supranationalism that governed his lifelong work for peace.

When Monnet returned to France, his country was at war. Medically unfit for the French army, he decided to put his experience to work by proposing a plan to the French and English, who had been buying their sup-plies separately, to purchase them jointly. Monnet soon be-came known on both sides of the

Eating Out

Young Chefs Bring Stars to Gastronomy in Bordeaux

By Naomi Barry

BORDEAUX (IHT) - A good part of France still looks like its old self. After more than a century. Henry James would still recognize one of his favorite spots.

In the autumn of 1876, James took his celebrated "A Little Tour in France." He paused for three days in Bordeaux, which he observed to be "a rich, handsome, imposing town, with vast curving quays hordered with houses that general of the last century. As the focus of distribution of the best wine in the world, it is indeed a sacred city which suggests delightful ideas, images of prune-boxes and bottled claret."

Although he found that the city "contained a very good hotel, it was not a hotel good enough, however, to keep you there for its own Today Bordeaux has a good.

modern hotel - the Frantel since most visitors of mark hope to be put up in the pretty chateaus of the great wine growers, the town until recently has been one of the least favored in France for public eating.
But of late there has been an upward surge in local gastronomy. Not long ago the city held a threeday Rencontres Gourmandes de Bordeaux to show off a new generation of bright, young restaurant in a casing of sea salt, imparting to the tender meat the excitement of hereabouts need no longer feel deprived if he lacks an invitation to Baron Philippe's table.

In traditional cuisine, a la Bordelaise is associated with sauces and bone marrow — crayfish on a bed of finely chopped carrots, onions and celery; a garnish of cubed po-tatoes and artichoke hearts; and a lavish use of cepes (a rich wild mushroom) jacked up with garlic.

A recent Rencontres Gourdmandes lunch at the Chateau Gruand-Larose sparkled with new directions. It was a joint perform-ance by two young chefs, Jean Ramet of Le Chapon Fin and Christian Clement of Le Meriadeck.

The main course was a filet mi-the nearby Atlantic. The veal was blanketed in heavy layers of the salt and was seasoned with thyme, bay leaf and fresh-ground pepper; it was baked at high temperature for 25 minutes. After a 10-minute repose, the solid-salt casing was broken before the guests, and the veal was sliced and served with a fumet of truffles. It was simple - and simply marvelous.

For the first time in years, Bordeaux has a galaxy of Michelin stars. Clement is a one-star man. Jean-Marie Amat of Le St. James has two stars, as does Francis Garcia of La Reserve, a Relais de Campagne in a wooded park on the outskirts of town.

Bordeaux's campaign to upgrade its restaurants to match its superlative wine is due largely to the dynamism of La Reserve's proprietor. Roland Flourens, who several years ago began to encourage the area's burgeoning young talents; Garcia, for instance, was his discovery. Next year Garcia will assume partnership with Flourens of the De-bern — one of Bordeaux' oldest restaurants, if one somewhat fallen from grace.

For a guest devoid of appetite, Garcia concocted a triumph. Cognizant of the limitations set upon him, Garcia produced a lilliputian banquet.

It opened with a demi-tasse cup

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Brown Boveri in S. Korean Venture

Brown Boveri und Cie, says it will set up a joint venture in South Korea with Daewoo Heavy Industries. Brown Boveri has a 49 percent stake in the venture, Daewoo Electric Co., which has an initial capital of $20 million and will, under a 12-year license agreement, build complete steam turbine sys-tems for oil-fired and nuclear power plants with Brown Boveri design. A new plant is planned at an estimated cost of around $130 million. The agreement provides that the joint venture is allowed also to export its production subject to certain conditions. The company also said it will establish a new company called North American Group from Jan. 1 covering the United States and Canada.

Italy Posts Surplus In October Payments

ROME, Nov. 22 (AP-DJ) - Italy registered a surplus in its overall balance of payments of 375 billion lire (about $441 million) in October, compared to a surplus of 935.8 billion lire in the like month of 1717. 1977, the Bank of Italy reported today. The figures are provisional and are not seasonally adjusted.

The Treasury Ministry has also trimmed its estimate of the government deficit for 1978 by more than 2 trillion lire because of increased pension revenues and reduced state investments in the south.

Canada Output Up 2.8% OTTAWA, Nov. 22 (AP-DJ) -Canada's industrial production rose 2.8 percent in September and was up 6.3 percent from a year ear-lier, Statistics Canada said today. The seasonally adjusted index rose to 134 (base 1971) in September.

U.S. Orders Up 6.3% For Durable Goods

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (Reuters) — New U.S. durable goods orders rose $4.59 billion, or 6.3 percent in October from the previous month to a seasonally adjusted $77.24 billion, the Commerce Department said. New orders rose 1.5 percent in September and 9.8 percent in August.

Shipments rose $1.56 billion, or 2.3 percent to $70.48 billion while the backlog of unfilled orders rose $6.78 billion or 3.2 percent in October to $220.42 billion. The department said more than half of the orders increase was attributed to the transportation equipment sector. Aside from that sector, orders were up 4.1 percent.

Our share of the Finnish market is a commanding 30% -but it is not holding us back!

Founded a mere 70 years ago, we Skopbankers are relative youngsters in the commercial banking world who have not had time to become bureaucratic. The policy of the Skopbank Group', and the key to its success, has always been flexi-

Decisions are made where they matter. And the adaptability of our approach enables related decisions to be taken at

This philosophy of banking has resulted in over 30% of all Finnish savings being entrusted to our group's care - a clear indication of the efficacy of our methods.

We are now the biggest Finnish banking group with a modern, full-service network of 1.300 offices. The natural choice for foreign and commercial banking requirements in Finland.

I, ETC.

ure to By Susan Sontag. Farrar, Straus and Giroux. 246 pp. $8.95. Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

I THINK one can trace the evolu-tion of Susan Sontag's styles of radical sensibility in the eight stories of "I, Etc."

"American Spirits" and "Baby" are what I would call condescensions, or ordinary people viewed entomologically. These two stories are from a time when U.S. intellectuals seemed to be trying to second from the human race. To show you what I mean, the names of the main characters in "American Spirits" are "Miss Flatface" and "Mr. Obscenity."

"Dr. Jekyll" and "The Dummy" are parables, or magnified aphorisms, or sociology in drag. Like "American Spirits" and "Baby," they are written without much warmth, sense of sympathy, or common cause with the characters.

"Old Complaints Revisited" is a case of Franz Kafka turning over in his grave. T.S. Eliot observed that John Milton had a damaging effect on young poets, and one might say that Franz Kafka left much of U.S. fiction in a fugue state. The bu-reaucracy that menaced Kafka's world has been perverted into a bureaucratization of writing in the United States, a reduction of inspiration to formula.

If "Old Complaints Revisited" dramatizes anything, it is only the claustrophobia of a persecuted idea. To paraphrase Jean-Paul Sar-tre, hell is a room with other people teaching. When Miss Sontag is obsessed with structure, she turns the reader into a rat in a maze.

There is a virtuosity of boredom in "Old Complaints Revisited." In its remorseless abstraction, it reminds me of Kurt Lewin's translation of psychological forces into the language of physics. In Miss Sontag's case, it is the language of politics, and this is part of the difficulty. In Dostoyevsky's time, politics could still rise to romance: now it is the elephant's graveyard of irony.

Miss Sontag may be aware of the limitations of her story. Her heroine says, "I'm afraid of losing the sense of my problem as a general one," and goes on to add that "too many particularities will make you take my problem less serious."

Accusing "the organization" some sort of political group — of depriving her of "her common-ness," she tries to construct a trage-dy around the absence of tragic materials. She attempts to arrive at a general or conceptual tragedy, which turns out to be only a pedan-tic flirtation with tragedy, a lesson again, disguised as a story. Miss Sontag ends "Old Complaints Revisited" by having her narrator exclaim. "If I could be lyr-ical! Unpredictable! Concise! In love with things as they are!" This appears to be prophetic, for in the two best stories of "I, Etc.," Miss Sontag does precisely that.

Going Far

In "Project for a Trip to China," far as one can go." For the author herself, this is almost true, but not quite. In this story, Miss Sontag has gone a long way toward completing a metamorphosis that I would describe as triumphant. There are a number of lovely ironies, which work precisely because there is love in them. Miss Sontag's embrace of the Chinese is wide enough to take in dragons, 100-year-old eggs, Myrna Loy and a 'pair of green and white canvas sneakers with 'Made in China' in ridged letters on the rubber soles."

The narrator ponders "an unfinished pain that might, just might, get lost in the endless Chinese smile." She listens to the women "speak bitterness" about men, learns that a "heavy death" is better than a "light" one. Reflectielong that China once "meant ultims refinements," she observes the to refinements." she observes the to "now China means ultimate simp war. fying." adding. "simpler, as intench great forgetting."

While "Project for a Trip blish, China" is a good story, "Unguic sup. Tour" is Miss Sontag's apothec sup. Tour" is Miss Sontag's apothec hase as a fiction writer. I believe it may be be one of the most modern stories the have ever read — perhaps one himisthe best. For the first time, Sue Sontag, the literary and social cage. Sontag, the literary and social colonic, is entirely at home in fiction efful-exhibit at the colonic transfigured, lilles.

Travel, in "Unguided Tour," is of Dante's "Life's Journey." just as the is also a kind of eschatology, an's, at terrogation of what Theodor Rrary-called "The Flight Forward." I narrator of "Unguided Tour" satism, "I took a trip to see the beautiarm, things. . . to say goodbye. When for er I travel, it's always to sople goodbye."

If I understand her correc Miss Sontag is saying that we of tence not live for the beautiful thirvil a alone, that we must forget abish in the catalog and submit ourselve; the thux of experience, to the chall ter flight of the self. If China is a great forgetting," America mustalorate be a great remembering. Saling the macroscopic of the catalog and the china is not self. be programmed, like China, continually improvised.

"Unguided Tour" is a lesson of how to write fiction for a dama spri world. Susan Sontag is her of best pupil. In the rhythm of its agra-as, the story resembles the fits that starts, the manic and depressed moods, of the romantic spint. It pears to me that here at last is ong-delayed admission that Ame ca includes Miss Sontag as well miss Flatface." Hasselblad Will Sets Up Prizes For Scientists

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 22 (AP). The will of Victor Hasselblad, the designer of the world famous Sweet ish camera, has instituted a net prize that will almost match the Nobel prizes in money, if not if prestige.

Signed only two weeks before his death in Angust, Hasselblad's will stated that the returns from a 22 million krona fund (about $6.45 million), will be awarded annually to scientists in the field of natural sciences. The amount to be distributed every year was unofficially estimated at about 3 million krona ($700,000). The value of the combined Nobel prizes amounted this year to about $800,000.

Hasselblad, not forgetting the professional corps using his camer-as, in his will also instituted an an nual prize for photographers of about $20,000 and a gold medal.

He acknowledged that Jackson belped the Yankees retain their world championship but said the rightfielder-designated hitter is not the key to the team's success.

As the Man Was Saying...

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (NYT) — The frank yet graceful use of 'I' distinguishes a good writer from a bad column," Ambrose Bierce wrote. "The latter carries it with the manner of a thief trying to cloak his loot.

Very well, then. I have been in the shop for a valve and piston job, and during that time sundry events came to pass that might have elicited comments here. There was, for example, the zealous breast-beating by a committee of baseball writers trying to choose between Ron Guidry and Jim Rice as the most valuable player in the American

Ultimately Boston's forbidding batsman won by a comfortable margin over the Yankees' incomparable pitcher, but before the votes were cast. Guidry's creden-tials were cited in arguments bordering on the passionate. It was all unnecessary.

Guidry won 25 games. Forty of Rice's 46 home runs either tied the score or put the Rex Sox ahead. Without a play-by-play review of the team's 162 games, it seemed safe to estimate that Rice's bat won 50 of them. How can anyone make ing as the Rice-Guidry election was till to make up full shares for both taken by the Yankees to decide a popularity contest between Billy Martin and Bob Lemon. When a pennant has been won, the players always meet to cut up the World Series swag and, being human, they are influenced in debatable cases by their likes and dislikes. It didn't strike everybody as a display of impulsive generosity when the Yankees voted half a share to the man who opened the season as their manager and half a share to his successor. Historians were reminded of the 1932 Cubs, who freely conceded that they might not have won the pennant if they hadn't got

Mark Koenig to play shortstop through the last six weeks — and then voted him a quarter of a share. Bowie Kuhn took the piece of mutton and lemon under advise-ment and still has it there, which explains why the commissioner has not yet announced the amount of individual shares. It would be characteristic of George Steinbrenner if

The New York Jets placed quarterback Richard Todd on the National Football League's injured-re-serve list yesterday after X-rays confirmed that he had suffered a cracked fragment in his left collarbone during Sunday's game against the New England Patriots. The move means Todd will be sidelined for the rest of the season.

Another vote at least as interest- the Yankees' owner went into the managers. One thing George can't abide is to have his players look as cheap as some of them are.

Listen to the Master

During the recent newspaper blackout in New York, Time magazine published a wonderfully-uninformed essay about America's sports pages. Chances are that even the papers hadn't been shut down, they wouldn't have considered the piece worthy of notice and perhaps it is a waste of space to comment on it now. Still, it's difficult to let such rancid prose ("that profusion of purposeful perspira-tion") go by unmentioned.

The magazine made the valid point that the general level of sports-writing and editing is higher than it was 50 years ago. However, it left the impression that its research into sports writing of early vintage began and ended with Grantland Rice's 1924 lead about the Four Horsemen of Notre

"It was not until the 1920's and early 1930's," said Time, "the so-called Golden Age of Sports, that such platinum-penned scribblers as Ring Lardner, Damon Runyon, Westbrook Pegler and Heywood Broun brought something resem-bling literature to the sports pages - and, alas, took it with them when they passed."

Long before the Peglers and Runyons, there were perceptive reporters brightening the sports pages with scholarship and wit — stars named Charley Dryden, Hugh E. Keough, Bunk MacBeth, Harry Cross and Hugh Fullerton. If the author of the Time piece wasn't around when these men were covering sports, there must be somebody around the shop who was old enough to read in the more recent gra of John Lardner, Joe Palmer, Frank Graham, Jimmy Cannon, W.C. Heinz, Dan Parker, John Kieran, Stanley Woodward, Chas Adams and Joe Williams, to mention a few in New York alone.

Transparent Spleen

Apparently acting over the head of the head coach, the New York Giants' brass has reacted to last Sunday's freak defeat by firing Bob Gibson, the offensive evordinator. Though Andy Robustelli, the director of operations, said the botched play that gave the game to the Philadelphia Eagles was not of itself the reason for Gibson's dismissal, the timing alone makes it look like an outburst of spleen in the administrative office.

Gibson sent in the play that failed and it wasn't a good choice. With the Giants leading, 17-12, and in possession with 31 seconds on the clock, the safe and sensible tactic would have been for Joe Pisarcik, the quarterback, to fall on the ball and let time run out. Instead, Gibson called for a handoff to Larry Csonka in a plunge for a first down that wasn't needed. Pisarcik spun to his right and as he came around, the ball brushed the shoulder of Csonka, who was lunging past on the quarterback's left. Jostled loose, the ball was fielded by Philadelphia's Herm Edwards, who ran all by himself for the winning touchdown.

Robustelli said the play was "the culmination of some things," implying that there had been dissatis-faction with Gibson's work, but the timing inescapably makes Gibson a scapegoat. Andy and Wellington Mara, the club president, had to take their chagrin out on some-body. Even as they were choosing a whipping-boy. John McVay, Gibson's immediate superior, was saying on television that responsibility for this play and every play on offense and defense was his alone. It's a difference in class.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 22 (AP) — Sergei Iovaisha scored with 58 seconds remaining in the second overtime here last night to give the touring Russian national basketball team an 81-79 victory over Arkansas. It was the final game of the U.S. tour for the Russians, who finished with a 9-4 record.

He had brought a case which, in the real world, was ludicrous, claiming damages against a former captain of his who had said on television that Docherty was "about the worst manager there has ever been." It would need 10 pages to chronicle the harsh, sometimes vicious, words Docherty has used in 16 years of buying and selling players to denigrate and write off the talents of those he falls out with.

Well, he had withdraw his case and forfeit $60,000 in court costs when he admitted under cross-examination that he was lying in court. Now he faces a further possible charge of perjury, the danger of losing his $50,000-a-year job at WHA officials met in Boston last Derby, and ultimately a charge of week but denied that merger plans bringing the game into disrepute that could threaten his livelihood.

Tooth and Fang

The point of retelling this almost a week after the court case is simply to show how big-time sport, since it became governed by the jungle laws of high finance, has long ago lost the straight and nar-row path of truth. Docherty is not the only liar in soccer and, for proof. Brian Clough, the Nottingham manager who receives mes-sianic applause wherever he travels, stood up at a public dinner on Monday and said: "I have told thousands of lies in football and the people who have employed me have told even more." No further comment on that, ex-No further comment on that, except the one from Docherty, appearing at the same function in front of 500 sports fans, who brought the house down with his opening line: "Mr. Chairman, you are not coing to believe this." are not going to believe this. .

We, however, had better believe that the good lady luck has laws of her own. Jim Blyth and Gary Bailey must if they are to stay same. This is their little tale: Last week, Manchester United's chairman announced that his manager could spend about $1 million and the manager promptly approached Coventry City to break all records by offering $900,000 for goalkeeper Blyth. At age 23, this was the second time in his life that Blyth, a Scottish international, had heard the call from Manchester United, although previously Coventry had not been interested in

started by a group of Pilgrims (Pelerins) who fled from T.Angleterre before the McCarran Act to found a colony in the New World (le Nouveau Monde), where they could shoot Indians (les Peaux-Rouges) and eat turkey (dinde) to their hearts' content. They landed at a place called a place called Plymouth (now a famous voiture Americaine) in a wooden sailing ship called the Mayflower, or Fleur de Mai, in 1620. But while the Pelerins were killing the dindes, the Peaux-Rouges were killing the Pelerins, and there were several hard winters ahead for both of them. The only time the Peaux-Rouges helped the Pelerins was when they taught them to grow corn (mais). The reason they did this was because they liked cornwith their Pelerins,

France's Second Empire: A Lot of Fun

By Paul Richard

PHILADELPHIA (WP) — "The Second Empire: Art in France Under Napoleon III." the wry, enormous show at the Philadelphia Museum of Art. is deliciously subversive, poking a hundred holes in that agreedupon fable called The Origin of Modern Art.

The conventional story is that it was born of a thrilling mid-19th-century confrontation in France. The antagonists were the Good Guy (most likely an Impressionist, reviled by the Es-tablishment for his white beret and unheated garret) and the Of-ficial Artist — trained in the academy and usually depicted as a black-mustachioed, airs-put-ting-on artist who schemes to keep the daring out of the Salon. In most renderings of the tale, the O.A. doesn't stand a chance. "The Second Empire" is, however. a revisionist exhibit. Instead of paying ritual homage to esthetic revolution, it stars the official artists The Second Empire embraced the reign of Napoleon III. from 1852 to 1870. "This is a period," writes French scholar Jean-Marie Moulin in the exhibition catalog, "that has been ignored — one might almost say erased by French art historians, who have considered it insignificant if not monstrous.

Confidence

Second Empire Paris must have been lots of fun. It was a time of confidence, splendor and frivolity. The music halls and theaters were full. Engineers were opening the Suez Canal and changing the look of Paris broad avenues were being rammed through the center of town, and under construction were the Opera, the Gare du Nord, Les Halles and the Bibliotheque Imperiale.

Ornament was — and, in this show, is — everywhere. Building facades covered with pediments and statues. Fronds and vines and tendrils crawling all over porcelains and glass. Metalwork modeled, chased, engraved, gemstudded; cherubim swarming on candlesticks and clocks. And, showing off their amply visible charms, at least a thousand nymphs and goddesses.

This art does not pretend to be original. Its motifs pay sometimes simultaneous homage to Greece. Pompeii and Rome, as well as to Gothic and Romanesque and art of the Near East and the Orient. Running wild are bedouins on horseback. Romans in togas, satyrs, dryads, and saints.

But underpinning the eclectic whole is a touching and often overlooked progressivism: Though conservative in taste. those official artists were radically innnovative in technique. The pavilions of Les Halles were made of iron and glass. The Degas, Rodin, Manet, Courbet and other early modernists were implacably at war with the imi-tative hacks of French official art. But one virtue of this show is its witty way of showing us that the paintings of the old guard and the young Turks were in spirit much alike.

Centerfold

Courbet's "Woman With a

Parrot" is here; clearly she be-longs alongside the "official" languid and seductive nudes in the salons. Delacroix and Ingres, too, are represented by large crowd-pleasers of women with out clothes. "The Source," the lovely Ingres borrowed from the Louvre, is a sexy as a centerfold. One Degas on view is "The Daughter of Jephthah," a huge, tale-telling Bible scene that is wholly of its time. "Young Girl with Roses on Her Hat," the Rodin terracotta, shows an innocent young lady, "wide-eyed, pert-nosed, with a bee-stung mouth;" she wears a fashionable

"The Second Empire" is a show whose time has come. We do art a great disservice when we lie about its heritage or exag-

here — is the prettiness of its model, not the fight for modern gerate its newness. Joseph Rishel and Kathryn Hiesinger, the two Philadelphia Museum curators who conceived the exhibition, received much help from French scholars and collections. Three-quarters of the works on view have never been seen out of France.

"The Second Empire 1852-1870" will go to Detroit early next year, then will be at the Grand Palais in Paris April 24-July 2.

Tougher Sentence Sough PEOPLE: For Stones' Guitarist

Attorney General Otto Lang announced in Ottawa that he has instructed government lawyers to ap-peal the one-year suspended sen-tence given Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richard for possession of heroin. He says it was too lenient. A spokesman in Lang's office said the appeal would likely be heard in the Ontario Court of Appeal in "two or three months." Richard.

34. was given the suspended sentence Oct. 24 and was ordered to continue treatment for heroin addiction at a private New York psychiatric clinic. He was also ordered to report twice a year to a proba-tion officer, submit medical reports

On the sick list is Willy Brandt, West Germany's former chancellor, who has suffered what is described as a mild heart attack. Brandt, a spokesman says, had been suffering a high fever contracted in the United States during a visit in October. He's hospitalized indefinitely, but plans to go to a health spa to recu-perate following his discharge. Brandt is 64.

One of the more reclusive citizens in Newport, R. I., is also one of the fashionable resort's more famous: Doris Duke. She spends most of her time secluded at her estate, Rough Point, surrounded by a high, barbed-wire fence, with guard dogs roaming the grounds. But occasion-ally Miss Duke ventures out, and when she does, it is usually in connection with the work of the Newport Restoration Foundation, whose work she has already aided to the tune of $12 million. The 63year-old tobacco heiress showed up this week in Queen Anne Square, a public park being revitalized by the foundation, to supervise the planting of trees and other work. Apparently. Newporters give Miss Duke a wide berth as a matter of courtesy, but a visiting photographer from Providence started taking pictures. A foundation official demanded that he stop photographing "the lady" and so the photographer called a policeman. Officer Kenneth Riley ordered the photographer to go away because he was "harassing" Miss Duke. That led to a complaint to the chief of police.
